

Request for a Hong Kong Tram Museum in Central & Western District to document the history of Hong Kong trams

Reply from the Hong Kong Tourism Board (HKTB):

The HKTB has all along proactively promoted a wide range of tourism resources in Hong Kong, including culture, art, heritage, entertainment, and the great outdoors, and will continue to take forward tourism projects with local characteristics in different districts to uphold Hong Kong's position as a preferred travel destination and enrich visitors' experience in Hong Kong. As such, the HKTB welcomes new initiatives to further explore and develop any tourism-related products or events that can help boost the international image of Hong Kong and attract visitors to the city. Since its inception in more than a century ago, Tram has become an iconic symbol of Hong Kong's heritage. With further development of tram-related exhibits and tourism facilities, visitors could discover the unique local cultures, as well as enriching their travel experiences.

The HKTB is pleased to provide inputs on the development plan from tourism perspectives after the completion of feasibility studies by relevant government departments and organisations.
